220. Transportation Planning and Policy (4)

Lecture/discussion—4 hours
Transportation planning process at the regional level, including the role of federal policy in shaping regional transportation planning, tools and techniques used in regional transportation planning, issues facing regional transportation planning agencies, pros and cons of potential solutions and strategies. Students having taken this course previously as course 289 cannot repeat for credit; having taken other course 289 offerings does not preclude taking this course for credit. Limited enrollment. Offered in alternate years.—III. Handy